Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Born in Cincinnati, Ohio, John Nicolas Klover (1869-1956) was a close friend of the celebrated march composer Henry Fillmore. Klover began his career as a trombonist, playing for vaudeville shows and several local organizations, and for fifty years played with the Syrian Temple Shrine Band of Cincinnati. Klover also served as editor and head of the band and orchestra department of the Cincinnati music publishing company John Church Company, later absorbed by the Theodore Presser. Although Fillmore's publishing company was also based in Cincinnati, Klover understandably published his own works through the John Church Company. He wrote 39 known marches, mainly for less advanced players. The Billboard March was composed in 1901 and dedicated to the General Amusement Paper, The Billboard - today is known as Billboard Magazine and still a major magazine in the entertainment industry. The Billboard March became well-known as a circus march, often used for clown walk-arounds, and also for short playoffs to end acts. It remains Klover's most popular work, and has been published in five different editions to date. This new edition by Richard W. Sargeant Jr. returns to Klover's original orchestration with extended woodwind section, SATB saxophones, a rich, full brass section, glockenspiel, snare drum, cymbals and bass drum, and is a welcome addition to the intermediate level band repertoire.
