LAUREL LEMAY AND THE MYSTERY OF MERRIWEATHER ABBEY

CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 342 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.9in. A jovial band of middle schoolers belonging to The Secret Society of the Merriweather Club, joins forces to battle bullies, overcome hysterical home economic disasters and attend advanced etiquette classes, all while facing personal challenges ranging from identity crises to classic, adolescent awkwardness. Each member believes she has a secret, inner gift, but it takes time to discover exactly what that is, and middle school demands vie constantly for their time and attention. Inspired by the timeless literature of Dickens, Austen and all their favorite classics, the girls feel adventure coursing through their veins as they try to emulate heroines from a long-ago time, calling on their deepest inner reserves to battle their own modern-day enemies. Most harrowing of all is the ultimate school bully, Espin Alldread, expelled from the nearby prep academy, who may be even more sinister than he first appears to be on the grounds of Merriweather Middle School. The Merriweather Club boasts its own poet laureate, Lucy Lyric, whose unfortunate home economics cooking disasters include a three- alarm fire requiring the intervention of the S. W. A. T. team and a local branch of the national guard. Lettie Penns comic hair- dyeing disaster brings her to the brink of a long- kept family secret. Linda Hubb, Miss Merriweathers favorite, gracious, and refined niece, longs to join others dancing at the annual cotillion, but must dream from the confines of her wheelchair. Her nobility shines forth as she runs for student body president against none other than the malevolent Espin Alldread. Will grace win over brute force Who will be named the conquerer Laney Penneypackers move from her familys upscale Manhattan co-op to a tiny, run- down...
