Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Perfect for parents, grandparents, homeschooling, teachers, teen church groups, community organizations, or anyone invested in the success of adolescents! I can t read that clock, it s not digital. I don t know who the Vice-President is. I ve never taken the metro bus. I can t do that These are actual statements from teens. Are you shocked? I was. The majority of adults today are not aware of what teens don t know, yet it is our responsibility to help prepare teens for the adult world. While teenagers have electronic communication and social media skills that are beyond the comprehension of many adults, they may be lacking in fundamental life skills that we take for granted. False assumptions about our teen s human interaction abilities and real world survival skills can leave them embarrassed or overwhelmed when facing challenges on their own. Let the L.I.F.E. (Learning Information For Everyday) book series help you challenge teens by asking questions to ensure they are equipped for the next phase. Readers will find the conversational text easy to read and benefit from the Truth and Consequence sections illustrating relevance of each topic. The Story sections are insightful and provide an on-going humor while Let It Go suggests one less thing to fight about with teenagers.
