Excerpt from A Discourse on the Dangers That Threaten the Free Institutions of the United States, Being an Address to the Literary Societies of Hampden Sidney College, Virginia Gentlemen: The name of your Association naturally suggested to me, that in preparing to discharge the task to which you have been pleased to call me, it would become me to select some topic connected with the Happiness of Mankind. The field, indeed, is broad: for what dity that man owes to his Maker, to the human race, to his country to society, or to himself, can I inculcate, without exhorting to that which makes for his happiness? But, fortunately for you, gentlemen, on most of these subjects Tam forestalled. On the most important among them, on the claims of Religion and the duties of Morality, you are daily instructed by those who address you in the name and by the authority of God himself. And were not this so, and were it not a profanation that I should take that holiest of names on unclean lips, I should still be restrained by the reminiscences connected with this spot.
