For example, Yaf_3 does not really mean the area of the parallelogram determined by the vectors o and f_3 , but is a mode of representing that area by a vector line perpendicular to its plane. And, again, the transition from the parallelepiped $\text{SyVa}/3$ to the uniplanar projection Sy_8 cannot but seem to be a piece of legerdemain, involving the transformation of an area into a line. The method requires indeed a succession of definitions, and a careful geometrical discussion of the properties of the quantities so defined. In quaternions, however, the whole is a beautiful and compact development from the fundamental conception of the factor $(o/3)$ which changes f_3 into a . Corresponding to every such quaternion, there is another quaternion known as the conjugate, which will turn f_3 into a particular vector a , equal in length to a , but lying equally inclined to $/3$ on the opposite side of it. In short, $a/3a$ lie in one plane, and a is, so to speak, the reflection of a in $/3$ (regarded as a mirror). The geometry is of the very simplest. Suppose, for example, that the quaternion $a/3$ does not change the length of f_i , but simply its direction--in other words, that it is a versor merely. Call it q , and its conjugate Kq . Then if OB , $6A$ OA_7 (Fig. 21) are f_3 , a , a respectively, we get at once? $OB = OA$ or $qP = a$ K ./ $OB = OA$ or $Kqf_3 = a$. (q...
