Jac and her friend Stevie, had dreamed about joining the Army together, but Stevie was found to have a medical condition involving her heart, and was refused on medical grounds. After the initial disappointment, both got on with their lives, and got a job in the local gym. It was while working there, that Jac met Ami; another girl in a long line, everybody thought. Ami wasn't Jac's usual type of girl, she came from wealthy parents, and she had been educated at a private boarding school, along with her younger sister Annabel. So, it was a surprise to everyone when after a romance of just a couple of months, Jac made the commitment of moving her into her flat five months ago. Jac, Stevie, and their friends, started playing football against another group of girls, in the park on a Sunday afternoon. Before moving onto the local pub, until early evening. Ami preferred not to go along with her, and it started to cause a rift between them. To avoid another argument, Ami decided to go along the following weekend, and she was glad that she did. As one of the girls from the opposing team, was an old school friend. But not only that, she was also an ex-girlfriend. It wasn't long before Jac realised she had a rival, both on and off the pitch. But she also needs to start looking a little nearer to home.
