Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Newport Daily News: Its History, Its Building, Its Personnel 1846-1892 The new owners of the paper, who succeeded Mr. Jackson in 1849 under the firm name of Cranston Norman, were Messrs. William H. Cranston and George H. Norman. These are both names long and well known in the annals of Newport, and the period of their administration marks what may be called the high tide of the early prosperity of the news. Mr. Cranston was not the least noted member, of a family long prominent in the city and State, and but recently become extinct. After his connection with the news ceased, he was a leading member of the bar for many years, served a long term as Mayor, and was in other ways an important factor in the politics and prosperity of the city.
