After being diagnosed with MS in 1995, Sandi Selvi began to decline rapidly and quickly became frustrated with conventional medical options. The drugs had nasty side effects, and in her case, the drugs didn't work. So, in March of 2000 Sandi joined forces with the brilliant doctors at Scripps in San Diego, to, as they so eloquently put it, Kill her immune system and build a new one with an autologous stem cell transplant. Theoretically her new immune system could stop the MS. During the two month medical procedure Sandi came pretty close to death, but a $10.99 box of used comedy tapes helped her through recovery, and changed her life. Laughter is indeed the best medicine -- Sandi now shares her medicine, and her medical miracle, through stand-up comedy. REVIEWS Sandi makes the toughest journey seem refreshingly funny. Every doctor, comedian and patient should read this great book. Neil Leiberman, The Comedy Coach(R) Love the raw honesty and humor. MS babe who got a stem cell transplant -- that alone is a miracle. Christy Evans Jordan, has MS I dog-eared over 20 pages that made me laugh out loud or burst in tears. I was awed by your journey, uplifted by your triumphs and overwhelmed by the simple message of family forever. Melissa Berger Spell-binding -- rings true on every level. Inspiring and empowering for anyone facing challenges they think are so insurmountable that they cannot be overcome. Lynn Ruth Miller, author of Starving Hearts I m so glad Sandi refuses to do stand-up in a wheelchair.because we don't have a ramp. (For giggles.) Sandi incorporates some great laughs into her MS story, proving that she s...
