All we around him wear a seemly woe, But one upon her heart received the blow; And as she bent above her mother's tomb, The while her sire we gathered to the gloom. Now winter laid a haud upon her hair. Full many a weeping peasant standing there Averred that he, beholding her to-day. Seemed to behold her mother passed away. Cameos Selected From The Worrs Of Walter Savage Laxdor. By E C. Stedman and T. B. Aldrich. With an Introduction. Boston: JamesR. Osgood Co. It seems singular indeed that some collection of the poems scattered through Landor's writings should not have been made before now; and it seems not equally singular perhaps, but certainly to be regretted, that the collection should not have fallen into other hands than those of Messrs. Aldrich and Stedman. Not that they have not made a very nice collection (though they have left out a few poems which might well have been inserted), but they have in their introduction succeeded in throwing a false air over the whole, and in making more erroneous criticisms in the short limits of a dozen pages than we had imagined could by the utmost ingenuity have been crowded into so small a space. To begin with, they say that Landor's minor poems bear a relation to his more extended work similar to that borne by Shakespeare's songs and...
