Excerpt from On the Statistics and Geography of the Production of Iron: A Paper Read Before the American Geographical and Statistical Society, on the 21st February, 1856 Nor is it strange that to the young or the ignorant, the idea of magical power should attach to those who, penetrating into the depths of the earth, shatter the mighty rocks with explosive power, rivaling the thunderbolts of Jove, and by the combined action of earth and air, and fire and water, reduce from the dull ore the glowing vivid metal, till then In stony fetters fixed and motionless. It is a perpetual struggle against resisting nature, and the victory is only won by turning her own gigantic powers against herself, so that the ancients called in the aid of Gods to account for the triumph; and for the gift which, as AEschylus has it, has shown itself a teacher of every art to mortals, and a great resource, made the unhappy Prometheus expiate the offence in fetters on the rude Caucasian rock. But in our day the interest which attaches to the production of iron rests upon a better appreciation of the difficulties to be surmounted; and upon a full knowledge that iron is the mainspring of modem civilization, Locke has told us that he who first made known the uses of iron may be truly styled the Father of Arts, and the Author of Plenty; and in our own day, Hood thus wittily sums up its multifarious applications: - The universality of the employment of iron is so manifest, especially in this country, that if any period has deserved the title of the Iron Age, to none can it be so characteristically applied...
