Springer Mai 2010, 2010. Taschenbuch. Condition: Neu. Neuware - This volume contains revised versions of the papers presented at the sixth edition of the International Workshop on Argumentation in Multi-Agent Systems, (ArgMAS2009), held in Budapest, Hungary, in association with the 8th International Conference on Autonomous Agents and Multi-Agent Systems (AAMAS 2009) in May 2009. Previous ArgMAS workshops have been held in New York City, USA (2004), Utrecht, The Netherlands (2005), Hakodate, Japan (2006), Honolulu, USA (2007) and Estoril, Portugal (2008). The event has now clearly established itself on the international calendar among researchers in computational argument and dialectics. A brief word to explain these topics is in order. Different agents within a multi-agent system (MAS) potentially have different access to information and different capabilities, different beliefs, different preferences and desires, and different goals. A key aspect of the scientific and engineering study of multi-agent systems therefore has been the development of methods and procedures for identifying, assessing, reconciling, arbitrating between, managing, and mitigating such differences. Market mechanisms and voting procedures are two methods for dealing with these differences. Argumentation is another. Argumentation can be understood as the formal interaction of different arguments for and against some conclusion (e.g., a proposition, an action intention, a preference, etc.). An agent may use argumentation techniques to perform individual reasoning for itself alone, in order to resolve conflicting evidence or to decide between conflicting goals it may have. Two or more agents may also jointly use dialectical argumentation to identify, express, and reconcile differences between themselves, by means of interactions such as negotiation, persuasion, inquiry, and joint deliberation. 336 pp. Englisch.
