Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . In this book, we take a hard look at the way secret agents combine with conventional and Special Forces at times, in this case, self-propelled artillery and mobile rocket launchers and causing mayhem to their enemies. Spy games are not always the cloak and dagger as depicted by Hollywood, the attack may well be in the form of heavy shells and rockets accurately raining down. In Code Name Anika I show you how such an artillery strike is set up by using the South African designed G-6 howitzer, a tremendously effective self-propelled 155 mm or 6.1-inch weapon able to shoot accurately up to 43 miles away. That is twice what any other comparable system can shoot at and the 46,000-pound armoured vehicle likewise has twice the fuel range of any other system. Then the G-6 is fast, twice as fast, being wheeled, not tracked as any other system in that category but you can read the details yourself in the book. Here the G-6 howitzer system is backed up by two 127 mm Valkiri MLRS platforms. Just as deadly and just as mobile, again, twice the fuel range than any other comparable system has and deadly. I found with my books that there is a great lack of knowledge on any weapon system not designed and deployed operationally by the US or NATO and even Russia. In this respect you would do well to read GMJ 35, American Military Might - Debunked. South Africa is leading the world in many military spheres, not your normal African country at all. These weapon systems and other advanced one are being sold to places like China, Russia, Iran and others. In fact, to the...
