McCoombs, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, has expressed the opinion that the La Follette Seamen s bill should be repealed. The Administration is coming to the same idea. Conditions on salt and fresh water have become chaotic, and the Department of Commerce has been compelled to suspend certain provisions of the Seamen s law owing to the bungling manner in which these were written. Spearman Lewis, secretary of the Lake Michigan Passenger Lines Association, recently asked this question: For whom has Congress convulsed the merchant marine of the United States, driven it from the Pacific and demoralized its operations in general? This is the answer: in his testimony before the Federal Trade Commission in San Francisco Andrew Furuseh, President of the International Seamen s Union, the sailor-lobbyist author of the bill, stated there were approximately 60,000 seamen employed in the United States, including the Great Lakes. Of this number approximately 14,000 were members of the union, and that of this 14,000 about 70 per cent would not be available in case of war with Europe because, being foreigners, Jhey would have to be interned. This leaves 30 per cent Americans in the organization, or about 4,200 American sailors. Granting these men the right to good food and humane treatment, we are nevertheless confronted with one of the most vicious examples of government by and...
