What Jake Weir doesn t know, and what his parents could never imagine, is that Jake can see ghosts! And hear them. And talk back to them! This talent comes in handy when he runs into Dusk s oldest, most famous ghost: Frank Barrone, a one-time lounge singer made famous by his booze-soaked ballad, Barroom Eyes. Frank was gunned down by a local mobster in 1951 and has been searching for his killer ever since. When he learns that Jake can see and hear him, Frank makes young Jake a deal: if Jake will help Frank find his killer, Frank will help his parents find a ghost to film for their upcoming Halloween Special on Public Access TV. Jake enlists the only friend he s made in Dusk, an overweight tomboy nicknamed Tank, to help him track down Frank s killer. As clues emerge and old leads heat up, Frank and Jake learn they make quite a team. But will Jake find Frank s killer? And will Frank find a real haunted house in time for the Halloween special? Fans of Rick Riordan and Ridley Pearson will love this first book in an exciting series. Supports the Common Core State Standards.
