iUniverse, United States, 2008. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 216 x 140 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.An architect fights for life, liberty and prime oceanfront real estate in this zesty courtroom drama. After separating from his wife Jessica, tony New York architect Max Green buys a Porsche and dates a stewardess, but finds his midlife crisis giving way to a potential end-of-life crisis when he s diagnosed with lung cancer. A more reflective man might seize the moment to simplify and take stock, but Max just sees another opportunity to keep on course. So, while he s weighing the benefits of surgery versus chemo, he throws himself into building his dream house on a Shelter Island beach, becoming embroiled in a regulatory battle with his neighbor, the mayor, who doesn t want his view spoiled by Max s development. To complicate things, he s having an affair with the mayor s sculptress/theoretical physicist/kickboxing aficionado daughter. In another twist, Max reconciles with Jessica and takes her on a sailing trip; when she s knocked overboard and drowned, Max faces a murder rap. Jacoby (Georgia Peach, 2000) uses these proliferating crises to create an engrossing procedural in every discipline from oncology to landscaping. (The courtroom scenes, easily stolen by Max s feisty, whip-smart lawyer, are especially riveting.) The author also illuminates the social world of well-heeled professionals like Max-as the protagonist gathers his entourage of doctors, attorneys, forensics specialists, environmental consultants and contractors, the book seemingly centers on the way expensive professionals require a team of other expensive professionals to enable them to lead their elaborate lives. Fortunately, Max is a compelling figure. He s exasperating-duplicitous, conniving, self-absorbed and oblivious to the trainwrecks he s steering himself into-but very much alive and driven by lust, even...
