Excerpt from The Latter-Day Saints Millennial Star, Vol. 72: August 11, 1910 Now to the Latter-day Saints: You have put your hand to the plough of the gospel. It would be destruction to you to turn back. If Mormonism, so-called, is true, then you cannot desert Mormonism without deserting the truth, and yet some men will deny the faith and depart from the Church, because they become offended at the conduct or the acts of one of their brethren. No matter what other people do, yet I say as one of old said, As for me and my house, we will serve God. Let each individual member of the Church feel in his soul that he has found the great prize, and that he will not yield it up, that he will not trample it under his feet, but that he will treasure it in his soul, and will retain it though all others in the world depart from it. It is the truth that will make us free, and upon the foundation of truth we must build our hopes and our expectations of salvation in the kingdom of God. Remember this, that no church can rise above the truth. No man, no teacher, no instructor of men, can ever become a law unto himself and build himself up above the truth. On the truth we must stand firm and steadfast. One of old, I think it was Pilate, asked the Lord, What is truth? Christ did not immediately answer the question, but He answered it at another time, and this was the answer that He gave to the question: Saith the Lord, my word is truth....
