Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Palmborg Colony Salt River Valley winters are full of sunshine and the temperature rarely falls below 36 degrees, ranging between that and 75 degrees. The fields are green and alive with stock which has come in from northern ranges and is fattening on alfalfa pasture. The percentage of sunny days is large, the winter sometimes showing less than a week of days when the sun docs not shine brilliantly during some portion of the day. The actual number of rainy days is small. The nights arc cool. (The above article on the climate was copied from a booklet issued by the Southern Pacific Railway Company, San Francisco, California.) The altitude of Marinette is 1150 feet above sea level. For 1914 the average temperature of Marinette for the spring season was 67.6 degrees; summer, 87.2 degrees; autumn, 70.9 degrees; winter, 50.5 degrees; and the average for the entire year was 69.1 degrees. The average rainfall for the year was 8.48 inches. Soil. Soil is the farmer s first concern. He needs good soil and deep soil...
