Springer, Netherlands, 2012. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Toxicological and pharmacological effects arise when chemicals interact with biophysiological functions in discrete cell types. There is a continuing need to screen novel compounds for their potential therapeutic effects, and once these have been discovered to understand their molecular actions, as the basis of using such compounds safely and for rational drug design. Pharmacology now uses all of the sophisticated molecular research techniques that are available for the development of safer and more efficacious drugs. Histochemistry has been usefully applied to developing new drugs (and assessing chemical safety) and is potentially cost effective. The need to test novel substances for their potential adverse effects has raised many questions. Toxicological pathology has moved away from the cataloging of lesions towards understanding the basis of the events that underly cell injury, especially for those secondary consequences of chemical injury that lead to malignancy and chronic disease. The focal nature of toxicologic lesions demands the use of microtechniques to provide data to help understand these questions. Histochemistry is under-utilized, but offers one of the key approaches necessary to address the problem of understanding interactions between a cell population and a chemical, the modulation of cellular biochemistry or the presence of a lesion in a test animal can be rationalised in terms of species differences that have no relevance to man as opposed to those that are of clinical significance or represent a warning of dire consequences to man. Softcover reprint of the original 1st ed. 1991.
