The phenocrysts are often seen containing or invaded by portions of the finer-grained groundmass. This matrix weathers brownish or yellowish owing to the oxidation of the iron present, while the phenocrysts of plagioclase become a dull greyish white, thus rendering the rock very conspicuous. In general the rock bears a very close megascopical resemblance to the diabase originally described as containing the Huronite while the phenocrysts themselves differ only in the degree of alteration they have undergone. The writer regards this diabase as the least altered representative of the series of rocks studied but which, under similar conditions, would have furnished a rock differing but slightly, if at all, from any of the more decomposed specimens first noticed and described as containing Huronite. An analysis of a portion of one of the least altered of these phenocrysts of plagioclase, kindly undertaken by Dr. Harrington of McGill University, proves the species to be labradorite. The following are 100 47 The specific gravity of carefully selected fragments with the bottle was 2 679. Under the microscope the rock is seen to be a very typical and rather fresh olivine diabase. In many instances the large phenocrysts are quite fresh and give the extinction angles characteristic of labradorite. Very often, however, irregular areas and patches have undergone considerable sericitization, the resulting scales of hydrated muscovite being very minute. Occasionally this alteration is carried farther and both zoisite and epidote are present in addition to the sericite as...
