These factors are inherent difficulties in the study of lead hazard intervention effectiveness. The earlier edition of this report noted evidence that indicated lead hazard interventions could effectively reduce the blood-lead concentrations of exposed children. However, only a limited variety of intervention strategies were documented and a number of data gaps were identified in the body of research (e. g. , long-term effectiveness and efficacy among children with blood-lead concentrations less than 20 g dL). It was hoped that additional research might now be available to address these issues. This updated edition was initiated to consider the latest research regarding intervention effectiveness. This report summarizes both the newer and previously reported studies related to intervention effectiveness. 1. 1 ORGANIZATION OF THE REPORT Following in Section 2 is a discussion of the measures for assessing the efficacy of an intervention strategy, primary versus secondary prevention, and source apportionment. Section 3 is a review of the scientific evidence. Section 3. 1 summarizes the results of the original 16 studies that were presented in the 1995 technical report, including recent information from these studies. In Section 3. 2, 19 additional studies are summarized that have examined the extent to which lead hazard intervention results in reduced lead exposure and lower blood-lead levels in children. A summary of the previous and additional scientific evidence is presented in Section 4. This summary focuses on how the new information adds to the body of literature reviewed in the technical report. Section...
