I hope and expect that they will agree with me. I think you might consider some of Sir Percys minor criticisms with advantage, should he care to urge them: if, for example, he has found a sentence obscure, it is an indication that it will be so to the generality of readers, though it may be perfectly clear to yourself. The only important point on which I should myself suggest any modification of your chapter is that you hardly seem to make sufficient use of your invaluable discovery of the poem addressed to Harriet in May 1814. --If one takes this in connection with the letter of March 16, with its references back for a period of one or two months; one sees how much he went through before he finally quitted her. I will send you the Esdaile poems tomorrow, registered, if I have the time. There are several other things which I wished to mention, but I must defer them for the present, except one of real consequence. Have you heard of a second Edinburgh marriage or have I dreamed it Perhaps I have over looked your reference. Pray communicate with me most freely, if I can be of any use in anything. Jeaffresons book has done this good, that it compels all concerned to pull well together, if they would not become sport for the Philistines. I was pleased with the neatness with which you disarticulated his tail. Please return...
