Univ Europeenne, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: French . Brand New Book. L augmentation des prevalences de l asthme et de la BPCO, la baisse attendue du nombre de pneumologues et l apparition de spirometres accessibles en soins primaires pose la question de la realisation de cet examen par les futurs medecins generalistes. Cette etude a evalue les connaissances theoriques et pratiques d internes de medecine generale francais. Une fois repartis en 4 groupes (1: connaissances theoriques et pratiques, 2: connaissances theoriques, 3: connaissances pratiques, 4: connaissances theoriques et pratiques insuffisantes), les 6 variables explicatives suivantes ont ete analysees: le sexe, la sensibilite personnelle a ces maladies, la formation theorique et pratique, l accessibilite a des centres d explorations fonctionnelles respiratoires et la realisation d un stage en pneumologie lors du DES. L analyse a porte sur 1261 internes repartis sur 29 universites. Seul 4,3 (54) des internes etaient situes dans le groupe 1. Ce sont principalement des hommes ayant effectue durant leur internat un stage en pneumologie. Le besoin de formation est important. L enseignement devra privilegier l apprentissage pratique et developper les stages de pneumologie.
