Baker was absent in England, Capt. Armstrong gave us a. Letter of introduction to his manager, Mr. French, to whose kindness and courtesy we felt much indebted. We spent a very pleasant evening with him and two young English gentlemen, who were living with him on the ranch. The Colonel had an excellent store full of Supplies, and we replenished our needs for the rest of the journey. The ranche is the largest in this district of country, we believe We saw a considerable number of cattle and horses. Crops of roots and grain can be grown by means of irrigation, and they were fairly good this season, Mr. French informed us. We left next morning, much refreshed for our journey. One of the young Englishmen had recently been over the route, and gave...
