Excerpt from Seventy-Five Years of Presbyterianism: A Review of the History of the Congregation of St. Paul's Church From Its Organization in 1835 Life was not easy for these early settlers. Set down as they were in the midst of an interminable forest, no semblance Of a road to or from anywhere, forty miles from the nearest source Of supply, no mill nearer than Port Hope or Cobourg in which to grind their wheat when they had succeeded in clearing enough land to grow any. Some of the younger men are said to have carried their wheat on their shoulders all this distance, and carried back the flour to the Settlement. In other cases, the stumps of the trees were hollowed and the grain pounded with a heavy mallet. Sometimes the wheat was boiled, and even chewed by the parents, for their children One lady whose descendants occupy prominent positions in our Congregation, writes in February, 1822, when she joined her husband, the first settler in the Township of Douro: We found our house unfinished, the doors had not been hung nor...
