Excerpt: . . . pocket after death, and added a farewell until both should meet in a better world. The ring placed on the Generals finger was one that Mrs. Grant had given, but for which in life his finger had grown too small. THE OBSEQUIES As soon as possible after his death a detail of his own beloved old soldiers from Wheeler post, G. A. R. , pitched their tent upon the needles beneath the pine trees. His remains were terribly emaciated. He weighed at his death much less than 100 pounds. During his military career he had taken part in more than thirty battles and innumerable smaller skirmishes. He was president of the society of the Army of the Potomac. During his illness he signed 500 certificates for newly elected members of that organization. All wished to have the old commanders name to their certificates. Immediately on his death offers of places of sepulture were telegraphed from Spring field, 111. ; from the National Soldiers Cemetery at Washington and elsewhere. The mayor of New York city offered Riverside park. The board of aldermen seconded the offer. After some consideration the proposition was accepted. The funeral obsequies at the cottage on the Mount and the embalming were placed under the direction of Undertaker Merritt, of New York city, who was immediately summoned to Mount McGregor. The family consented to a military funeral, and President Cleveland was requested to select the pall-bearers and appoint the necessary officers to...
