Excerpt from Philadelphia Medical Times, 1877, Vol. 7: A Bi-Weekly Journal of Medical and Surgical Science This volume of 241 pages, written from personal experience, which, according to the author's statement, is now equal if not superior to any one living in the United States, as I have treated over two thousand cases in hospitals and private practice, is intended, in part at least, to correct false impressions, current in our text-books, and compilations now in course of publication. Prof. Dowell claims that his observations prove - 1. That there are no permanent or universal pathological lesions in yellow fever. 2. That the adjective yellow is not appropriate, because not more than one in six of the patients affected become yellow, and of those who die of black vomit not more than one in three turns yellow before or after death. 3. The yellowness of the skin, when it does occur, is not due to bile, but to the haematin of the blood exuded into the intercellular spaces. 4. That dengue is much like a mild case of yellow fever, but it never kills, treat it as you will; while yellow fever is very fatal, treat it as you may. 5. No one ever has a second attack of either dengue or yellow fever. This work is evidently the production of an earnest and devoted physician, who has enjoyed unusual opportunities for investigation, and it is therefore eminently worthy of careful study. 115 unquestionable value is, however, somewhat diminished by a want of completeness of observation, of moderation in statement, and of rigorous exactitude in deduction, - blemishes which we trust will be corrected in a future...
