Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Agriculture and Horticulture in the Rural Schools In this advance agriculture is moving in, the same lines as all other trades and professions. The apprentice system is dying. Modern civilization is not satisfied with rule-of-thumb methods learned by imitation. It demands that all arts be rational arts intelligently based upon an underlying science, and has created the technical school to meet this demand. But not every farm er s son can attend the agricultural college. Nearly all must de pend upon the literature issued by such institutions. The bulletins are often too technical to appeal to the average farmer; they abound in scientific terms based upon distinctions of which he is ignorant. It is evident that the agricultural experiment station will never accomplish its purpose unless there is diffused among our farming population an elementary knowledge of the sciences relating to agriculture. The rural schools and the high schools attended by farmers sons must provide the necessary instruction. There seems no other practical way.
