Lost: Illegal Abortion Stories (Paperback)

By -

Melbourne University Press, Australia, 2008. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. In 1967, a young woman came to Dr Bertram Wainer s Melbourne surgery seeking emergency medical attention after a backyard abortion. She was desperately ill yet too afraid to go to hospital. For Wainer, this was the start of a long hard campaign to overturn laws that made abortion an offence punishable by up to 15 years in jail and forced many women to turn to unskilled operators. For five years, Wainer worked against a government that refused to address the problem and bravely tested the abortion law by forcing the issue into the headlines. In 1972, the threat to women s health remained, with abortion apparently legal but not publicly available, and so Dr Bertram Wainer, his wife Jo and two other doctors opened the Fertility Control Clinic in East Melbourne, Australia s first public abortion clinic. In 1985 after over a decade of running the clinic amongst a constant tirade of protestors at their doors, Bertram Wainer placed the following advertisement in the newspapers: Abortion Abortion . Information is sought by Bertram Wainer for a book on abortion in Australia. If you know what...
