S. border metropolitan statistical areas. According to government researchers, academicians, and industry representatives, both cyclical and structural factors have contributed to the decline in Mexicos maquiladora employment and production since 2000. Representatives of industry groups emphasized, and our economic analysis confirms, that the cyclical downturn in the U. S. economy has been a primary factor in the decline of the maquiladoras. However, industry sources and other experts noted that Mexicos maquiladoras also face increased global competition in the U. S. market, particularly from China, Central America and the Caribbean. The real appreciation of the peso relative to the dollar and key competitors currencies has heightened such pressure. Additionally, industry representatives indicated that Mexican government policies such as changing the tax regime applied to maquiladoras have created a climate of uncertainty for investors. Meanwhile, owing to commitments undertaken under the North America Free Trade Agreement ( NAFTA ), Mexico has now phased out some benefits to the maquiladora sector. Factors affecting the recovery of Mexicos maquiladoras include recent industry and...
