Excerpt: . . . and medium of payments is vested in the general government. And again, collating the grant to Congress, and the prohibition on the states, a just reading of the provision is this: Congress shall have the power to coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, emit bills of credit, or, make any thing but gold or silver coin a legal tender in payment of debts. Money is a property conferred by law, upon a material adopted by society to pay debts, measure values and facilitate exchanges, by floating the commerce of the nation. It is, or ought to be, issued by the general government; it should be based and current upon the faith and wealth of the nation, and made of a material without intrinsic value, that the government may the better control its value and volume. Mr. Carey says, Its...
