

The Seeker

By John Dalessio

John Dalessio. Paperback. Condition: New. 160 pages. Dimensions: 8.5in. x 5.5in. x 0.5in. Some 13 billion years ago, theory had it that all of the matter and energy of space was at a single point. The Big Bang was an explosion of space within itself with all the particles of matter traveling away from each other expanding endlessly in every direction, thus creating what we now know as the Universe. From the very beginning of recorded history to modern day, people on planet Earth worshipped a god-like entity. Religions were created by man to worship a single God-like or many Gods. Many of these religions believed that an omnipotent being or a God created the Earth, the Universe, and mankind. John Alessi had never been very religious. Although he was raised Catholic, he grew up questioning the origin of creation and the existence of God as written in scriptures by man. He came to think the existence of God could be confirmed or invalidated by seeking out life on other planets in the far reaches of outer space. A recent major breakthrough in space ship propulsion would permit Johns ship, the Seeker, to travel at light speed. Traveling in mere hours...
