Excerpt: .now offered to purchase the tunnel for 250,000, but this was declined, and later the King invited Brunel, Sen., to give him an account of the tunnel, as a result of which Lord Althorp granted to the company from the Treasury a loan of 246,000, this being in 1834. In January, 1835, Brunel having refused the offer to construct a bridge over the Nile, which was afterwards carried out by Stephenson, the tunnel works were resumed, but after more floodings and loss of life, the tunnel was eventually opened to the public on March 25, 1843, when in 27 hours 50,000 persons passed through. This the greatest, as it was the most tedious of all Brunel's famous works, by which he laid the foundations of the art and science of tunneling of the present day, concluded his honorable life's labors, for paralysis seized him, and he died on December 12, 1849, aged 80 years--full of years and honors--his career affording one of the most remarkable instances of perseverance in the world's history. W. N. B. The perpendicularity of a tall monument is affected by the rays of the sun. It leans away from the luminary, owing to the expansion of the side on which the rays fall.--Ex. 2 are shown to the scale underneath. These figures are quite clear and intelligible in themselves; but for the sake of those of our readers who may wish to make this article, we give...
