Reviews

This ebook will be worth acquiring. It is actually written in basic phrases instead of hard to understand. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

Excerpt from The Fabricator, 1936: Published by the Senior Class, New Bedford d104ile School Cilee New Bedford d104ile School was established by the trustees and incorporated in accordance with Chapter 475, Acts of 1895. The school opened for day students in October 1899. The first year, enrollment was 11 day students and 183 evening students. The first building was 64 by 100 feet, three stories high with an annex of 12 by 67 feet for the engine addition, the Mechanical, Chemistry and Designing departments were added to the curriculum. In 1905, due to the increase in the enrollment, an addition carrying the building to the Maxfield Street line was built. the third addition was put up in 1911 on the north side of the original building. These two were connected by a tunnel and a bridge. In this addition, the Mechanical, Chemistry and Designing departments were established. Another expansion was necessitated in 1922 and the Max field Street building was extended west to the line of the original building. In this addition, the C. Y. P. And weaving departments were extended. On the third floor, a fine gymnasium was built. At present, the school is one of the most sanitary, ample, and effi cient textile schools in the country. The present building contains square feet of floor space and over worth of equipment. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
