This was Optimization of the Model necessary to accommodate an equal-time-length requirement of the response matrix. In this report, optimization of the model represents the Model Stresses most efficient pumping strategy developed from the group of Between 1990 and 1997, 12 extraction wells were either all possible pumping strategies that can be applied within the installed or converted from water-level-monitoring wells to operational constraints of the remediation system. The intercept contaminated ground-water flow between the PIU strategies defining the extreme solutions are (1) do not and Watson Creek. operate any pumps, and (2) operate all pumps at maximum Average pumping rates for this network ranged from capacity all of the time. Neither of these strategies can meet 3 0 ft d (cubic feet per day) for several wells during several the constraints that apply to the problem considered, but 3 months to...
