Excerpt from Address of Thomas Gold, Esq.: Delivered Before the Berkshire Association, for the Promotion of Agriculture and Manufactures, at Pittsfield, Oct. 3d, 1816 The duties of the day require me to review the events and transactions which have happened since the foundation of the society, that relate to agriculture and manufactures, the legitimate objects of the institution. In executing this task, I shall be allowed by your indulgence to ask your attention to such topics as concern the general welfare of this institution, rather than to details of rural management. If I had the leisure to prepare an appropriate lecture on the composition of our soils on experiments to ascertain their native fitness for various modes of cultivation, and crops on the nature and preparation of manures on the rearing and managing of our domestic animals on the means of rendering farms more fruitful on the various species of sustenance composing the vegetable creation on the planting, rearing and preparation of fruit and forest trees on materials for man? The objects and the measures to promote them, it might; well be doubted whether this be a fit occasion for such a display. Respect for my audience, and sincere concern for the Welfare of the Society, induce me to omit these topics, and (leave myself to other considerations which the crisis imperiously demands.
