Scenes which, presenting em blems of mourning mortality, still the tempests of the mind; awaken all the best sympathies of the heart; and quell, for a time, each tumult of the passions. In contemplating these awful remains of former ages, how much more solemn and affecting are our emotions, when we view them with reference to the events, which they have witnessed!--When we behold the grand towers, rising over the Conway, is it possible not to be struck with admiration? But when we call to mind the many midnight murders, they have been witness to, how is our admiration tempered with sensations, partaking of terror! in. How different are our feelings, when we survey the consecrated ruins of Netley and Llantony, the unrivalled abbey of Tintern, or the Cistercian arches of Vaixe Crucis! The first situated near the Southampton water: the second in a...
