In his Pulitzer Prize-winning "Exploration and Empire", William H. Goetzmann analyzes the special role the explorer played in shaping the vast region once called "the Great American Desert". According to Goetzmann, the exploration of the West was not a haphazard series of discoveries, but a planned (even programmed) activity in which explorers, often armed w/ instructions from the federal government, gathered information that would support national goals for the new lands. As national needs & the frontier's image changed, the West itself...
