PEOPLE OFTEN refer to me as a tree hugger or hippie, but honestly, if you walked past me you would have no idea I am an Earth Lover. Well, maybe you could spot it with a slight cringe when someone throws something in to the trash instead of recycling or composting, or you could hear me kindly explaining to the girl at the cash register that although she insists I take the free plastic bag, I really don't want it! You might also spot me swinging my arms like a crazy person when an automatic air freshener goes off. I want our descendants to look back at this moment in time and be glad that we woke up; a time that we became about being more not having more. We restored our connection to our place in this diverse system, we rejuvenated what had been destroyed, and we developed compassion for one another and all living things. A time where communities grew stronger and created a ripple affect so as a race we became stronger and took responsibility...
