Unthank Books, United Kingdom, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Words And Women: Two is the second showcase collection of short prose by women writers in the East of England and the first appearance in print of four specially-commissioned texts for the page and performance, About. The memoir, fiction, creative non-fiction and performance texts inside reflect the brilliance, boldness and depth of women s contemporary writing in the region. The book, published by Unthank Cameo, builds on the success of last year s inaugural competition and anthology, shortlisted for a Saboteur Award and praised as a bold and insightful collection containing much vigorous writing - by Mark Bond-Webster in the Eastern Daily Press. This year, the winning entries - including the delightful narrative Cornflake Girl by first prize winner Lora Stimson - embody vivid imagination and ambiguity, delicate and subtle prose coupled with strong images and deep emotions. A young woman ponders how she has mysteriously wronged a professor. A wife compelled to spy on her husband is caught out in her own intrigue. We follow a child of the tideline. And, in a fevered night, a mother lingers in a river while danger gathers on the bank. What do you say to Kurt Cobain s son? How does it feel to be an outside woman at the tropical funeral of a lover, and what does it mean to climb Mount Sanitas? The four specially commissioned texts in Words and Women: Two explore women s relationship to place. About , supported by Arts Council England, brings to life the voices of Jane Sellars hung in Norwich for being idle at Trowse , a woman who walks the Bungay Straight on a pilgrimage of grief, 18 year old prostitute Anguish locked up in a...
