Not illustrated. 1906 Excerpt: . stations and 6 versts of wire per regiment, and sometimes purchased at the expense of the latter). The equipment pertaining to corps headquarters was withdrawn and put at the disposition of army headquarters, and the like. We must regard the telephone as especially useful for regimental use while occupying positions within the divisions and between headquarters of neighbouring divisions. For the larger units it is preferable to employ the telegraph, because the possibility of talking by telephone with all the subordinate officers leads superior headquarters to wish to know everything and direct everything, and this to such an extent that there often results interference with the initiative of subordinates, a superabundance of orders, embarrassment, and even orders contrarv to those of the immediate chiefs. It is reported that an electric line between Chicago and St. Louis is contemplated. The present Illinois traction system, known as...
