Excerpt from The Illuminating Engineer, Vol. 12: The Journal of Scientific Illumination; Official Organ of the Illuminating Engineering Society; January, 1919, to December, 1919 The interesting paper read by Mr. A. P. M. Fleming in his recent paper before the Institution of Electrical Engineers, to which we refer in the present issue (pp. 9 dealt with a subject of vital importance. Industrial research laboratories may be of many kinds. They may be associated with individual works, groups of factories, or associations of manufacturers. In some cases different types, run by the same company, may work hand in hand, as, for example, the laboratory at Cleveland, Ohio, which deals with general research problems, and the more industrialised laboratory at Schenectady, which is mainly concerned with technical and manufacturing problems. Of great interest, also, is the experimental factory where promising inventions can be tested on a commercial scale, thus preventing disappointment and encouraging manufacturers to take up immature but hopeful inventions which require commercialisation. Mr. Fleming also deals with the training of the research staff. We entirely agree With his insistence on the need for scientific attainments and University training on such a staff. Such qualifications, however, can only be secured if they are rewarded by corresponding remuneration. There must be as good prospects of advancement as exist in any other department of the firm s work, and a proper recognition of the valuable work that such a research staff can do. Otherwise, gifted men will not be attracted to this branch of work. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
