2007. Hardcover. Condition: New. 320 This study addresses the issues of nationalism and regionalism in the empirical situation of Orissa within the multicultural context of India. By focusing on the Oriya situation the study basically highlights two major forms of conflict-----regional nationalism and regionalism in multicultural and/or multinational countries such as India. To differentiate these two forms of conflict the study, as a point of departure, makes a distinction between political nationalism and cultural nationalism. The former is associated with nationalism at the macro-national level and the latter with nationalism at the regional level in multicultural/multinational context. About The Author:- Subrat K.
