Meeting challenges This adventure is about a regular guy, small business man in modern times, who finds himself recruited as an agent for an inter galactic agency that promotes healthy social and political relations between worlds, etc. He is an educated man with decent moral values, middle aged, and settled in a healthy loving relationship when everything changes for him. His life is given a different direction and he finds new aspects to himself as he has to face the challenges of moving past what he thinks is possible. His cultural references are expanded in the areas of humour and social patterns. A day of the main character that is not in the book starts with his alarm waking him in his room in the training facility. Jay hears the soft tone of his alarm and looks around the room. Remembering where he is he lays back down and thinks about his situation. I have been here two weeks, the food is good and these beings seem pleasant he thinks. But he asks himself if it is real, and if he is a prisoner or if he is a specimen. What will they do to me next? he thinks to himself as he remembers the day before when he was taught how to follow the social norms of a alien species that is all furry and about a foot shorter than him on average. Those Korobs he thinks to himself, they can t stop touching each other or me, I can t take it then he laughs to himself. Well it is better than going to work at home I guess, he thinks aloud and rolls to sit on the side...
