It murmurs of the ocean grand, Strange fancies of the sea;Of a fairy home beneath the foamWhere mermaids gay with glass and combAre gliding merrily. It tells of pearls and mosses green, Of coral islands fair, Of birds that rest, with snowy breastOn sailing ships or billows crestOr skim through sunny air. It speaks of storms and lashing waves, Of monsters fierce and grim, Of sunken gold and jewels oldAnd wrecks of many a vessel boldIn caverns weird and dim. Whispers it nothing low, my child, This shell from the ocean strand, Of One who guides each ship that rides, And holds the winds and waves and tidesIn the hollow of His handAbout the PublisherForgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
