Promises, promises everyone makes them, from our elected leaders, to school teachers, to clergymen, to family and friends. But then the reality of the harshness of our conditions cause us to see our lives with different eyes. We have given others the benefit of the doubt, patiently waiting for the promise of growth, and change to spring forth like a blade of grass after the rains. For years the rains have fallen, still the grounds are barren. Were we not told that the grass seeds were planted? Have we been deceived again, and again, and again? Will the lies ever stop?
