

Les potentialités géothermiques de l'Algérie du Nord

By Bouchareb-Haouchine, Fatima Zohra

Condition: New. Publisher/Verlag: Éditions universitaires européennes | Hydrogéochimie des sources thermales | L'Algérie septentrionale recèle plus d'une centaine de sites thermaux se manifestant sous forme de sources chaudes dont la température à l'émergence peut atteindre 98°C. Ces émergences constituent de précieux indicateurs de températures des réservoirs thermaux souterrains. Conséquence directe d'une circulation profonde et des temps de résidence assez longs, les eaux thermales analysées montrent une minéralisation à dominante Cl-Na et SO₄-Ca traduisant l'influence des formations évaporitiques. De nombreuses sources présentent des dégazages de CO₂ et, plus localement, de H₂S aux émergences. Les géothermomètres basés sur l'équilibre SiO₂/H₂O et la méthode des IS donnent des températures comprises entre 60 et 120°C. Enfin, une nouvelle approche basée sur la combinaison de deux méthodes (méthode AAPG et méthode DST référence) a été développée afin de mettre à jour la carte d'iso-gradients géothermiques. Cette carte montre trois zones à fort gradient géothermique en relation avec les structures géologiques en profondeur. Deux sites expérimentaux ont été retenus pour la vérification de la cohérence de ces estimations : le site thermal de Hammam Righa et les sources des monts du Hodna. | Format: Paperback | Language/Sprache: fre | 112 pp.
