AN ADVERTISEMENT. It is not without a grave cause, that I renew the memory of sorrows, mistakes, and strong and (as I think) ill-considered measures, themselves long since past, but abiding in their effects. The re-awakened interest in Tract 90 within the Church of England, attested by its recent reprint in the United States and by the wish which has been felt in England that it should be reprinted amongst us, will justify, I trust, an explanation of the circumstances which occasioned the original prejudice entertained but too widely against it; for to republish...
