Excerpt from Biographical Sketch of Linton Stephens: Containing a Selection of His Letters, Speeches, State Papers, Etc The life of linton stephens was one of character rather than of incident - more the life of a thinker than an actor upon the stage of human affairs. He chose to be a spec tator of passing events, and was content to weigh their sig nificance and watch their succession through the loopholes of retreat, so as not to feel the pressure of the crowd. He had little relish for the hot arena of the world-strife. The mild dignity that environs the good citizen was more beautiful and more attractive in his eyes, and more grateful to his tastes and habitudes, than the applause of listening senates, or the Victor s wreath of laurel. The blaze of public notoriety he shunned. He shrunk from all manner of self-exposition or display. Vain-glory was not among the imperfections of his nature. He was perfectly satisfied with knowing the truth of anything, or any fact, himself uncaring whether the outside world appreciated his knowl edge thereof or not;...
