Excerpt: . of taking from the public lands adjacent to the line of road such timber as may be necessary for the construction of the road. This provision of the statute was literally construed in a subsequent ruling of the Interior Department, thus permitting the use of timber from public lands by railroad companies, or their agents or contractors, for purposes of construction only and not for repairs. It would seem that the prohibition in this case should be based, not on the fact that the contracting tiecutter was a non-resident of the State in which it was proposed to cut the timber, but rather on the fact that the railroad, for which the supplies were to be cut, was not constructing a new line in the meaning of the law, but proposed to use the supplies so obtained as repairs. Indeed, in the present...
