This lovely little book is 8 x 8-1/2" size; 1/2" thick; 79 pages, illustrated throughout with color glossy reproductions of Victorian paintings, some full-page, some suitable for framing if you like. These paintings, a compilation of works at the Bridgeman Art museum, all have one thing in common - there are children in them, from babies to adolescents, as seen through the eyes of the artists of the time. There are happy paintings, and some sad ones; upper-class children dressed up in fine drawing rooms, and slum children in their attic rooms; children resting, playing, running wild, having fun, doing their duty, sitting still in church, or with their pets, out in the country, indoors, in the city, and more. The Victorians, who are said to have 'invented' childhood, believed it to be a...
